Tornado Clouds All Mixed Up; Funnels Sighted

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UP) — Several small tornado clouds bounced over northern Kansas and south central Nebraska last night, part of a mixed-up weather pattern.

Strong southerly winds hit western Kansas and parts of Missouri yesterday, kicking up dust storms on the plains.

Meanwhile, traces of snow were reported last night in parts of western Nebraska, and Kansas City temperatures climbed to 80 degrees yesterday at 5 p. m. for a near-record in Missouri and Kansas.

An airplane pilot reported a tornado funnel at 3:45 p. m. yesterday between Hoxie and Colby, Kan., over U. S. 24. The pilot said the funnel dipped close to the ground and dissipated, moving northeastward.

Later several funnel clouds were reported over Nebraska, but none apparently touched ground.

Garden City, Kan., reported winds up to 55 miles an hour with blowing dust late yesterday. Winds at Dodge City measured 38 miles an hour, along with blowing dust. Visibility in that southwest Kansas area was reduced to two to three miles.

Several other areas in southwest Missouri and throughout Kansas reported high winds. No damage was reported.

Jerusalem Opens Walls for Pilgrims

By LARRY COLLINS
United Press Staff Correspondent
JERUSALEM, Jordan (UP) — The old walled city of Jerusalem opened its gates to thousands of American and other tourists and pilgrims today as Christendom mellowed its saddest and most glorious hours.

Visitors who converged on the Holy Land from most other parts of the world thronged through the city's narrow, cobbled alleyways to visit shrines lining the path that Christ took to his death on Mt. Calvary.

Thursday night, thousands of Holy Week pilgrims stood bareheaded in a tiny olive grove at Gethsemane to "watch one hour" in the garden where the bible says the agony of Christ began 1,925 years ago.

All week Easter pilgrims have poured into the city, defying the unseasonably chilly air. The arrivals have swelled into the largest tourist influx Jerusalem has known in modern times.

Gone was the fear which kept the tourists from the holy sites during the last two years. Instead every hotel bed in Jerusalem and the smaller communities for miles around are booked. Hotel keepers gave up their own sleeping quarters and even accommodated late comers in reception rooms.

At the Mendelbaum Gate—The only spot where Arab and Israeli territory join—a steady flow of pilgrims crossed into Jordan from Israel.

The babble of tongues of all the European nations, South America, Asia and the Middle East turned Jerusalem into an international city.

Brother and Francisco fathers led services under the chill, clear Palestine sky and the silver given leaves of the olive trees that looked down on Christ during the night of his crucifixion.

After services the pilgrims crossed Palm Sunday Street, along which Christ is presumed to have entered Jerusalem to visit the underground grotto where tradition says Judas delivered the kiss of betrayal.

This morning in the Basilica of the Holy Sepulchre, over the site where Jesus died on Calvary, Roman Catholic Mass of the Presanctified was celebrated. It was followed by the long vigil which is observed until the time tradition says Christ died.

Weather

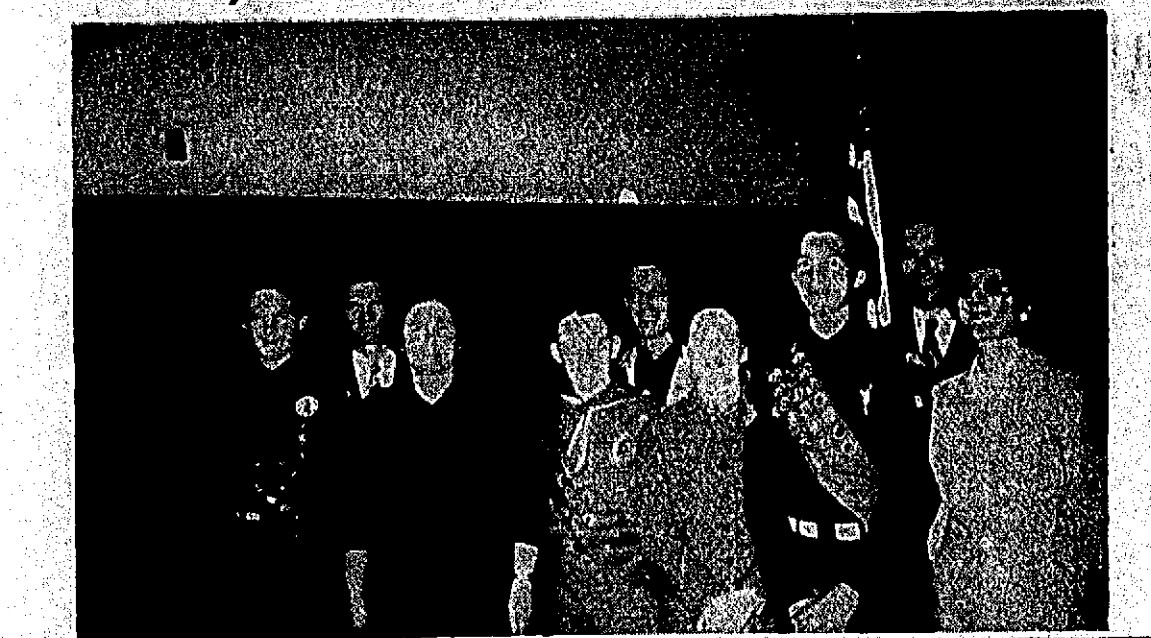

Arkansas — Partly cloudy and cooler Sunday. Few showers north east today.

WASHINGTON (UP) — Most of the country can expect clouds, rain and snow Easter Sunday, except for New England, the West and Bureau said.

New England was promised fair, sunny skies.

The last Easter-like weather—snow—was predicted for the mountains of California east into Utah. Rain and showers were forecast for the already flooded Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain area.

At This Season of the Year Feminine Fancy Turns to Hats

By Mary Anita Laseter

To men, and possibly to some women, too, one of life's prettiest puzzles is midday's chaparral. At this season of the year, especially, feminine fancy lightly turns to thoughts of hats. But what kind? That's up to individual taste and the current style.

Before the advent of "ready-made" hats, the shopper would pick out a hat frame, tell the milliner the general way she wanted the finished product to look, and wait for the results.

Fortunately for some of us without the imagination and the ability to visualize what a mere hat frame can become, this is no longer true.

Hats of every size and shape and color can turn a shop or a store into a little girl's fairyland, come-true. And if the lady shopper is an average, female-type woman, she'll take quite a long time to pick out "just the right one."

A mere male can't understand this, but follows it for two very good reasons: (1) The rest of the ensemble must be considered, and colors and fabrics have to be matched or blended. (2) A woman's natural curiosity makes her want to see how she looks in different kinds of hats.

Through the years, what has been the most popular color for a woman's hat? The answer is—black, whether it's staid and somber or sleek and shiny. And "white" is a close second.

This year, whether black or white or red or blue, spring millinery for women will have softness for the keynote. The designs created and the materials used played on the soft feminine look.

Flowers large and small, have been used in many millinery creations, thus making them appear even more suitable for spring. You see, flowers, spring, new hats, and women just go together.

A lovely combination of all four is certain to have a pleasing result.

Ward Warm's Up to Issues of Campaign

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—Chancellor Lee Ward of Paragould warmed up to campaign issues here Thursday and said he would tell the state sometime next week if he would seek the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Ward said recently he would be a candidate for governor if he were reasonably certain he would be elected. He moved a step nearer that toasting stage Thursday.

At the moment, I think I am going to be a candidate," he said.

He reiterated upon his being convinced he can win. He said again he had received encouragement to make the race from all sections of the state.

Ward, if he should get into the campaign, would be the third candidate, Gov. Orval E. Faubus announced recently for a third term, and Chris Flunkbeiner has joined the political caravan.

Baker Withdraws

One other man considered a likely candidate said Thursday he would not run for governor or for any other office. State Sen. James P. Baker, Jr., of Helena headed the advice of his friends to keep out of "the type of campaign" that will be fought in Arkansas this year.

Baker issued a short statement saying he had decided not to make the race for governor. He is rounding out his 12th year in the state senate. He said, however, that he was not relying from politics and "might be thinking" of something two years hence.

Ward was in Little Rock to discuss his possible candidacy with persons interested in his campaign.

Ward said many persons were concerned about Arkansas taxes—particularly the conceit sales tax increase and the state income tax increase. He said he found dissatisfaction also with the property reassessment program.

View of Voters

TUA OGI REPORTED "deep concern" about the possibility of a third-term governor's getting control of some of the major state agencies.

"People believe that he (Faubus) is about to assume a control over some of them that will not be in the best interest of the state," Ward said.

The segregation—integration problem also is a matter of grave concern, Ward said, particularly in east Arkansas.

At District Level

The Paragould Chancellor has proposed to put the school integration question in the hands of the people through local opinion elections at the school district level. He also has said he would remove federal troops from Central high school in Little Rock by ordering that all federal court orders be obeyed.

Lana Turner's Daughter Kills Lana's Lover

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — An underworld boy friend of actress Lana Turner was stabbed to death with an eight-inch carving knife Friday night by the movie queen's beautiful 14-year-old daughter.

Johnny Stompanato, one-time bodyguard for Mickey Cohen and former associate of Bugs Siegel, was found dead by police on the floor outside the door to Miss Turner's bedroom.

Police booked Miss Turner's daughter, Cheryl, on suspicion of murder early today.

Police Lt. F. H. Colford said the stabbing occurred at Miss Turner's home.

Killed After Argument

Beverly Hills Restaurant Stephen Crane, former husband of Lana and father of Cheryl, was summoned to Miss Turner's home immediately after the stabbing to be with his daughter.

Crane told police an argument broke out in Cheryl's bedroom shortly before with Stompanato threatening to kill her mother if she broke off their relationship which had bloomed into a rumored romance.

Police said Miss Turner told them Stompanato threatened "to get me or fix me if I broke off with him."

Stompanato, like his former boss, Bugs Siegel, died violently in a glamor girl's home. Siegel, a California underworld kingpin, was shot to death in the mansion of his girl friend Virginia Hill.

Lana's physician, Dr. McDonald, called police about 1:33 p. m. p. s. (1:35 a. m. est) to report the incident when they arrived they found the swarthy Stompanato dead with part of the eight-inch knife protruding from his stomach.

There had been rumors that Lana and Stompanato were going to break up. These reports became widespread when Lana and the former Cohen bodyguard started back to Beverly Hills from a holiday at Acapulco.

Police said Lana told them an argument started Friday night and that she had told Stompanato not to quarrel with her in the presence of Cheryl.

Another benefit of the unplanned low-perigee orbit, the scientist said, will be data on the vehicle's drag as it re-enters the atmosphere.

If the batteries last longer than planned or if the satellite's life is shorter than expected, Van Allen said, the transmitters may be functioning when Explorer III re-enters the atmosphere. If this occurred, valuable information on temperatures at which the satellite was subjected will be gained, he explained.

Of Explorer III's perigee (low point), which is the closest to the earth of any satellite orbited so far, Van Allen said:

"We almost hit into the cosmic ray data from vertical rocket firings of the past few years. This close sweep to the earth is allowing us to build up a profile of cosmic ray information at various altitudes from 117 miles to more than 1,700. From all indications the satellite will outlive the batteries (estimated life: two months) and we are quite delighted with this orbit."

The Veterans Administration has removed the 2 per cent down-payment requirement on GI loans effective today. Veterans, however, still must pay in cash the closing costs on the loan.

The Federal Housing Administration has put into effect, as of April 1, the lower down-payments permitted under the new housing law. The required 3 per cent down-payment on FHA-insured home loans will now apply to the first $13,500 rather than the first $10,000 of the loan. This will save home buyers about $400 on medium priced homes, the White House said.

The controls on fees, charges and discount mortgages have been eliminated by both the FHA and VA. This action will permit interest yields on home mortgages to be adjusted more flexibly to market conditions and will promote the sale of new homes.

The Senate passed a compromise version of the bill by voice vote Thursday and sent it to the White House about a few hours after it was House approval by a 28-vote margin.

The only real test in the House came on an attempt to send the measure back to the House-Senate Conference Committee which drafted the compromise version for modification of its billboards control provision. That move was snowed under, 222 to 109.

During the follow-up Senate debate, Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) who had originally sponsored the roads speed-up plan, said the bill would provide national advertising standards on new interstate highways for the first time.

The measure would provide a special bonus for states which adopt federal standards for regulating billboards along such routes.

At night, after KXAR goes off the air, or in the distant part of the counties, the Hope Fire Department will be used in Hope and every effort will be made to contact spotters in towns in the path of a storm.

For the past two days were devoted to the type of storms that will create tests in the Hempstead County Storm Warning System and how the storms are detected. To-day the explanation is how the network will function in this county.

The Hope City Police Office, open 24 hours, will be the central warning point. A warning from the U. S. Weather Bureau will be placed to this point with a high priority telephone call. All spotters in Hempstead County are directed to call this point for storm information.

Upon receipt of an authentic warning, the City Police will immediately call KXAR who will in turn immediately issue a special "Concise" severe storm warning. You can always identify the radio warning by the long sustained musical note preceding the announcement. It will be repeated many times until the alert is over.

If the path of the storm includes Hope, the City Police will call the Hope Fire Station who will issue a three minute long steady "blast. This is a warning to turn on your radio for details. The Police will also call the Southwest Bell Telephone Office. Operators there will place calls in rapid fire order to schools, hospitals, industries, and other key groups in the path of the storm. In the event any school or large group of people cannot be reached, a police or county car will be dispatched to the critical point.

Arkansas State Police, the U. S. Weather Bureau, and our spotters will track the storm and continuing information will be given by the above means until the all clear is given.

WONDER BUG—An electronic bug said to imitate perfectly the conditioned reflexes of man and animals is put through its paces at the Szegez, Hungary, University. The "ladybug" is controlled by light rays which cause it to move, but it can also react to other stimuli. For example, when a gun is fired, the robot "protects itself" by stopping and turning off its lights. The device, which may be shown at the Brussels World's Fair, is demonstrated by its builder, Daniel Muszka, to two women doctors from the university clinic for internal diseases.

Explorer III Orbit Giving Valuable Data

WASHINGTON (UP)—The eccentric orbit of the Army's satellite Explorer III is providing more valuable information about cosmic rays than would have been gathered from a more circular orbit, a scientist said Thursday.

Dr. James A. Van Allen, member of the National Academy of Sciences' IGY committee on the earth satellite program, said the "tremendous sweep" of Explorer III's elliptical orbit is "splendid for cosmic ray research."

The orbit ranges from 117 to 1,740 miles above the earth.

Van Allen also reported that the transmitters and tape recorder on Explorer III are working properly.

Of Explorer III's perigee (low point), which is the closest to the earth of any satellite orbited so far, Van Allen said:

Disney Won't Open Branch Disneylands

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Walt Disney said today he will not open branch replicas of Disneyland despite offers from a dozen foreign nations and uncounted requests from this country.

Some organizations have gone so far as to offer complete financing, but Walt has turned them all down.

"Disneyland is a personal project with me," he says. "I must stay close to it, otherwise the park would no longer be fun."

Not yet three-years old, and already visited by 10 million videoed visitors, the 100-acre park is in a constant state of flux. It barely resembles the Disneyland that opened in July, 1953.

Disney is holding to his prediction that it will never be completed.

New attractions this year include a haunted house, wax museum, a three-masted sailing ship, a submarine ride, Science Hall, "Edison Square" and a Liberty Street.

Most spectacular addition is the Grand Canyon diorama, a tunnel featuring a 305-foot wide, 44-foot high three-dimensional painting that convinces viewers they've been transported from Anaheim, Calif., to the awesome grandeur of Arizona's big ditch.

Each year Walt plunges 2 million dollars into his fairytale, adding new wonder to the eye-rubbing magic already created.

In 1959 he will build a 100-foot high mountain of steel and concrete with a skyway running through it and various rides careening down its sides.

"The fun is in the building," Disney said during lunch at his Burbank Studio headquarters. "We'll remove some of the old things as they lose popularity to add new innovations. This will keep people coming back."

Bit parts: Loretta Young has signed a new contract with her sponsor for the 1958-59 season in which she will appear in 16 dramas, play hostess on all 39.

Singer Howard Keel has been offered a five-year contract with CBS for three shows per annum. Anita Ekberg has a reputation for not making frequent TV appearances. "I won't wear the same gown twice," she says, "and each one costs me $600 and up." Tab Hunter, the bobby-sox idol, may star in "Up Periscope" at Warner Brothers in advance of his role in "Damn Yankees," which is being delayed by the current musicians' strike.

'Gimmick' Arrives in the Kremlin

By DOC QUIGG
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—That fine old American word "gimmick" arrived with a bang inside the gates of the Kremlin this week.

The President of the United States, in answer to a question in a news conference, said that his view of Moscow's halting of nuclear tests was that the action was just a gimmick that should not be taken seriously. He added that that was not a harsh opinion. Everybody in the United States knows what he meant. But how about the poor fellow who translates the American language into Russian for the boys in the Kremlin? He must have had the cold sweats.

A Deceptive Device
The word is in all American dictionaries. So he could have looked it up and found that it means a tricky or deceptive device. But all of them list it as a slang word. What to do? Should the translator try to find a piece of Russian slang to match it?

Or should he get a standard Russian word that might be something like the right meaning—and if he did this, how close did he come to letting Khrushchev know what he said?

I got in touch with my lexicographer friend David Guralnik, editor of the New World Dictionary out in Cleveland, and asked him what he would do in such a quandary. He said he wasn't familiar with Russian slang but that the Russian word "sautka" means a shabby trick and "khutost" means a kind of deceptive trick.

Griffith Controls It
Gimmick, which has spread to all phases of American life, apparently came into the language from the cant of carnival people. Guralnik looked into his citation file and found the word listed as far back as 1928 as carnival talk for "the brake, tip-up or other device used on games of chance to make them crooked."

And the angel answered . . .
Fear not ye . . . He is not here, for He is risen, as He said.
Matthew 28:5-6

DOROTHY DIX

Plain Jane Complains
She's Still Unclaimed

Dear Dorothy Dix: If a girl does not have a boy friend, should she doll herself up, anyway? I'm 27, have always kept myself clean and neat but don't see much sense in dressing up too much when I haven't anyone to make myself attractive for. If anyone asked me out on a date, I'd get myself fixed up, but as it is I don't bother. Have I the wrong attitude?

PLAIN JANE

Dear P. J.: Lives there a girl with eyes and ears who can remain blind and deaf to the appeals of the beauty, purveyors of TV, radio, newspapers, billboards and magazines? You don't dress up to catch a man, dear; you dress up to raise yourself in your own esteem. Doubtless the reason you have no boy friend, and never get asked for a date, is this attitude, that you should only "doll up" after you have a man. Set the trap with bait, and it will be snapped. Leave the trap empty — who's interested.

Appearance comes first with everything — whether it's a man, a job or popularity with your office. A job or popularity with your office is a torchlight procession lipstick, zing pink nail polish, get outfitted with a chemise, apply a dash of "Pursue Me" perfume, then prove that, while clothes may not make the man, they sure change a woman.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am 15 years old and have been going out with a boy of another religion. My parents are in the dark about this. If I tell my folks, I know they'll forbid me to go with him. How can I solve this problem? LINDA

Dear Linda: Tell your folks at once. They'll find out some time, and will be deeply hurt by your deception. If they do stop the friendship, all you can do is give in gracefully. They're acting in your own best interests.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I've been dating a boy I love for the past year. However, I doubt that he loves me. I never know when he's going to ask for a date until he shows up eager to be off. Once it was three months between dates. Neither of us wants to go steady, but I would like to see him more often. He knows how I feel about him; could this have any effect on the way he treats me? BABE

Dear Babe: Any egotistical male boy or man, loves to dangle the girl who's in love with him. Your boy friend knows you'll always be waiting for him, that you're always ready and anxious to go on a date, that your love will endure anything. Well, fool him! Go out with other boys. When the inevitable one shows up, tell him you already have a date, or prefer not to go out on such short notice. Give him some of his own medicine; that's the most difficult kind to swallow.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Shortly before our marriage my fiancée and I

from the cant of carnival people. Guralnik looked into his citation file and found the word listed as far back as 1928 as carnival talk for "the brake, tip-up or other device used on games of chance to make them crooked."

I had a quarrel. She hauled off and hit me, knocking out my two front teeth (she's a farm girl, and husky). Although we get along swell now, she wears those two teeth on a chain and it's very embarrassing to me. I've asked her many times to throw them away, but she won't.

Dear Phil: Promise her a string of nice pearls in return for the teeth. Or convince her that you no longer need visual reminders to keep in line. Or, better yet, ignore the dental evidence of bygone quarrels. The teeth will lose their kick (or bite) if she thinks you've lost interest in the struggle to conceal them.

their departments would be cut out of the military chain of command completely. Their job from now on would be administration, supply, training and budgeting.

The combat elements would in effect become elements of the Defense Department, responsible to McNamara and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

McElroy, who would have vastly increased power under the reorganization scheme, told newsmen that proposed legislation needed to carry out parts of Eisenhower's plan would be ready to send to Congress in about 10 days.

Eisenhower called on Congress to repeal any current laws which give responsibility for military operations to any Pentagon official other than McNamara.

Since unified planning would be conducted by the Joint Chiefs and their Joint Staff exclusive of the individual services, the President said, the Joint Staff should be enlarged and equipped with an operations division to serve as the link with unified commands.

Rains Bring Death to 11 in California

By UNITED PRESS
Flooding rains in California, blamed for at least 11 deaths and damage of more than $2 million dollars, eased up somewhat today, but weathermen warned of a new storm bearing down on the state.

Elsewhere, a tornado threatened in storm front moved out of the South, and another storm blew in from the New England.

As Californians headed into the Easter weekend, hundreds of families were out of their flood-drenched homes and flood waters threatened to San Joaquin Valley.

Gov. Goodwin Knight, who earlier declared all of California a disaster area in the state's worst storm in 10 years, Thursday asked the federal government for three million dollars in aid.

Triple Slaying Finally Ends a Wife Swap

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UP)—Businessman Stewart Martin told a court jury how a casual relationship with a trucker budded into friendship, developed into wife-swapping, and ended with a triple murder spree.

Martin has recessed today because of Good Friday.

Martin, 42, a store-owner, related to defense attorneys Thursday at the murder trial of truck driver Thomas Whitaker the series of events leading to the outburst of violence at the businessman's home last June 25.

Whitaker, apparently enraged at a divorce court's decision giving his children to their mother, invaded Martin's fashionable home with a shotgun. There he allegedly killed his ex-wife, Mrs. Alma Martin, his son, Jack, 10, and his daughter, Regina, 9. He is on trial for the slaying of his daughter.

In two days of testimony, Martin described how he first met Whitaker in 1955 when the truck driver made deliveries to several of his stores. The two hit it off, he said, and often double dated with their wives.

It soon became apparent, Martin said, that his wife Dorothy was falling in love with Whitaker. She seemed to enjoy being with him, he said. "She told how he hunted and fishing, which I did not, and seemed to pick out the things he did and I did not do."

Eventually, "Dot was spending more time with Tom than with me," he said. "I was left alone with Alma while they were dancing."

Soon he began to realize Whitaker's wife was a "fine woman," Martin said. Whitaker, meanwhile, had asked his wife for a divorce.

"We are grown people," Martin said he told the others when the four met in the Whitaker kitchen to three things out. "It is quite evident Tom and Dot are interested in each other, and we should be able to work out our problem."

Double divorces and re-marriages followed, the mothers winning custody of their children. Three months after Martin married Whitaker's ex-wife, the truck driver went berserk.

Warren Eyerette, a county pauper attorney handling Whitaker's case, put Martin to some stiff cross-questioning. Martin denied that he asked his first wife for a divorce before Whitaker entered the picture, but conceded that he told his wife he would offer no opposition to her plans once it was known Whitaker was divorcing his wife.

Beginnings of the wife trade were recalled by the defense, which introduced photos taken when the two couples had taken trips together.

The Southeast, dumping hail and heavy rain at scattered points. A twister hit near Marshall, Ark., Thursday, causing minor damage. Near Birmingham, Ala., hail stones one-half inch in diameter accumulated to a depth of three inches Thursday night. Pine trees in the area were stripped by the fall.

SHIPS SEIZED

TROMSOE, Norway (UP)—Two Norwegian seal-hunting vessels with 20 aboard were seized by the Soviet coast guard last Saturday and were taken to the Russian port of Vladivostok, it was disclosed today. No news of the ships or their crews has been received here since the seizure.

OUTDOORS with John Alden Knight

The probabilities are that the average gunner in the United States does not realize how heavy gun pressure can be on waterfowl throughout the course of a season. If he shoots ducks, he knows that every likely spot where ducks can gather is covered by one or two duck blinds. The famous ducking grounds, such as Chesapeake Bay, Curlew Sound or the marshes along the shores of Lake Erie either are closed to public shooting (which means that all the blinds the law allows will be installed therein) or are a long succession of blinds, all privately owned and patrolled.

To give you some idea of the inroads in the national duck flock on shooting area can make, take a look at these figures just in from Missouri. In that state there is a shooting ground called Fountain Grove Wildlife Area. Men who shoot there must report their kill to the wardens.

In a 70-day season, closing last Jan. 2nd, 7,520 birds were brought out of the Fountain Grove area. Most of these were Mallards, but in the kill were 183 Canadian geese.

At nearby Swan Lake, an easy drive by car, 3,980 birds were killed most of them Canadians. In the two shooting areas a total of 12,302 hunters registered in for shooting.

Of course, these figures account only for the birds that were killed, retrieved and reported. Inevitably, with our present limit of four ducks per day, some birds would be taken away without being reported — not many, but some, maybe another ten per cent.

Now add to that the usual crippling loss of 25 per cent and you about have the score for a small section of Missouri for one season. And the kills are not impressive, considering the number of guns; about average. With these figures as a yardstick you can imagine what the national totals must be.

Small wonder that Fish and Wildlife holds us down to four ducks a day.

Duplication—Of Efforts
There are two governmental organizations which seem to have a perfect genius for doing things either the hard way or the wrong way, sometimes both. These are the U. S. Corps of Army Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation. Of course, we could be wrong, maybe we have talked to the wrong people or read the wrong news reports. But this does not seem likely. Here is an example.

For sometime now Arizona and California have been snubbing over which state can use what amount of water from the Colorado River. Meanwhile, the Bureau of Reclamation did some dredging work in the river bottom. In so doing, a valuable wildlife and waterfowl area called Topock Marsh was drained.

Neither state could step in and rectify the damage because of the lawsuit about water rights going on in the United States Supreme Court. And the Bureau of Reclamation evidently did nothing about it. So U. S. Fish and Wildlife stepped into the picture.

Now water is being diverted into Topock Marsh so that once more it can hold its yearly average of 40,000 ducks and geese. The report does not say who is doing — and paying for — the incidental work but we would like to lay a small bet that we can guess who isn't.

Whooping Cranes
The last remaining survivors of the flock of whooping cranes are just about now on their way to the nesting grounds near Great Slave Lake in British Columbia, Canada.

For some time it was thought that this spectacular big bird was extinct. Then by great good fortune, one of the government naturalists discovered the flock at Great Slave Lake. Immediately steps were taken to protect this flock at all costs. It then numbered only 14 birds.

Now here are 31 birds in existence — 26 at large four in captivity at New Orleans and one at San Antonio. Unfortunately, one bird was lost during the southward migration last fall to the wintering grounds in the National Wildlife Refuge at Arkansas, Texas.

There can be no reason or excuse for anybody to shoot one of these birds. They are mostly white with black wing tips, and they have a wingspread of about seven feet. There is no bird resembling a whooping crane which can be shot legally, even during the gunning season. So keep this in mind: should you have a gun in your hand and one comes within range. The penalties for shooting one are exceedingly heavy.

THE STORY: Tom Weber realizes that cattlemen intend to drive out the small ranchers and farmers from Lobo Valley. Someone has fired his gun. Tom is the son of Charles Weber, whom Tom never forgave because of his drinking before Tom left home 11 years ago.

Charles Weber, who had once owned a half million acres of land and horses and cattle running into the thousands, was currying down one of the two horses in the barn when Leo Blainik, his brother-in-law, came into the barn.

Blainik had a 40-acre farm a half mile from Weber's and he had walked over from his place.

"Morning, Charlie," he greeted Weber.

Weber nodded soberly. "Hello, Leo."

"Your wheat looks good. Be ready for cutting in a week."

"I'll still have wheat in a week."

"That's why I came over. My fence was cut last night. Blainik frowned and shook his head. "And somebody took a shot at the house."

"It had to come to that, sooner or later."

"I think it is time to go to the sheriff."

"You think that'll do any good? Moon is Mike Denner's man, and Mike Denner is Pete Rawlins' man. Blainik seated himself on a nearby upended keg and watched Weber finish with the horse. Weber was aware that something else was on Blainik's mind and he guessed what it was.

He said, finally, "You've heard that my son has returned."

"He was the stranger at the barbecue yesterday?"

"Yes," Weber was silent a moment. "He is a bitter man—dark."

Strange Facts Pertaining to Smokers

By BLOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
NEW YORK (UP)—In endeavoring to lay bare "the psychology of smoking," three Harvard scientists came upon this "signal fact": The ability of the man to give up the smoking habit is related to how long he was a breast-fed baby.

"Many will wish to explain such a finding away," said the scientists. Nevertheless, their statistics showed that light smokers who can stop whenever they wish were weaned at the age of eight months but heavy smokers who have tried to give up smoking only to find they can't, were weaned at 4.7 months. (The figures are statistical "means" of course.)

"In our data late weaning was associated with the personality traits that are also related to ability to stop smoking," said Charles McArthur, Ellen Waldron and John Dickinson in reporting to the American Psychological Assn. "Groups with the ability to stop smoking contain a smaller percentage of bottle babies. Thumb-sucking was more commonly reported for men who continued to smoke."

Early weaning is equated by many psychologists with "infantile frustration." This frustration, the Harvard scientists granted, could have many outlets in the development of the babe into the adult. Theirs and other studies "suggest that these 'deeper' needs have little or no effect on whether one smokes but great effect on how tenacious the habit, once adopted, may become."

Non-smokers, the scientists found, tended to be of the "middle class"; they were "earnest young men" with a drive to improve their social status, who believed in the virtues of work and conservation. "Their parents, and they themselves are often pious."

But the smokers in their statistical breakdowns were "likely to come from more privileged backgrounds, often entering business or humanitarian careers." The smokers went in for "scientific or technical careers in many instances."

MORE STABLE MINORS
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UP)—George Trautman, commissioner of minor league baseball, said today, "We have a chance for a good year." Trautman said the minors may be "more stable" despite a loss of 25 leagues.

Marshall Eads' bunk.
"Lily," Eads exclaimed, "you're looking prettier than I ever saw you. Got a new color in your cheeks?"

She seated herself beside Eads' desk. "It's rustlers!" she exclaimed. "I tried to talk to the Sheriff about it, but he isn't interested. Said he'd talk to me to Jeff when Jeff got back to the depot, getting on the train."

Eads gave her a sharp look, quickly dropping his eyes again. "Things all right between you and Jeff?"

"What makes you think they aren't?"

"Oh, I wasn't thinking anything like that."

She bit her lower lip. "Jeff is busy. He wants to be governor." She hesitated. "Uncle Marsh, can you give me my bank balance as of this moment?"

"About $2,000 in your joint account."

"How much has he in his own account?"

"Twenty-one thousand."

Easter Morning

Christ the Lord is risen today, Hallelujah! The Rugged Cross and the dark tomb have both been snatched from their association with death. Christmas is sanctified in Easter. Christ is risen! Heavenly love turned Dark Friday into Good Friday... an event packed with all the drama of human emotion and Divine sacrifice. He lives and we, too, shall live, in the measure in which we learn to kiss the Cross... our cross as well as His. His promise, "Three days and I shall build this temple again," has been fulfilled. It is the time for beginning again... time to start anew. Golgotha and Crucifixion take on radiant beauty when they are seen through the fragrant glory of the Easter lily. That is where the spirit was triumphant over death. So, Raise your joys and triumphs high, Hallelujah!

It is Easter!
